Upland RDA buys, sells pieces of land

By Kimberly Heinrichs

The Upland Community Redevelopment Agency is buying one piece of land and selling another.

The City Council, acting as the Redevelopment Agency, approved during a closed session week before last the purchase of a 15-acre vacant lot in its airport redevelopment area, City Manager Lee Travers said.

During the same closed session, the council agreed to give an option to Mollard Corp. for a nearly 6-acre lot which sits approximately at the northeast corner of Benson and Stonecrest avenues in another redevelopment area, Travers said.

The land the agency is buying — which is located at the southeast corner of Benson Avenue and Foothill Boulevard near Cable Airport — is the first the city has purchased for the project, he said.

No other lots are being negotiated for the nearly 2-year-old project at this time, he added.

Travers said the cost of the property has not been determined. The council set a price limit, but he said he could not make the offer public before negotiations are completed.

Travers said the city agreed to purchase the land in order to keep it from being developed as a residential area.

Holidays increase need for donors

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Christmas is the season for giving everything except blood.

Even regular blood donors often get caught up in the rush of the holiday season and leave the blood bank off their lists of things to do, said Paul Sautter, director of donor resources for the Blood Bank of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties.

Because of this, the bank is currently short of O positive blood, Sautter said. And right behind that is the need for O negative blood, he said.

"We're always short to one degree or another throughout the year," Sautter said. "But the holidays have more impact because people are busy."

Although the blood bank was closed Christmas Day, that doesn't stop people in the two counties from needing blood that day, he pointed out.

"Since 250 to 300 pints of blood are needed every day, that's just that much more that we'll be short," he said.

People can donate blood at the Ontario bank at 1959 E. Fourth St. Tuesday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., on Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Friday from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The blood bank also prefers having larger reserves during the holidays to be prepared for an increase in accident victims.

"The potential is there because there are more people on the road," Sautter said.

Flu season and continued fear of AIDS has also cut into the blood supply, he said. He stressed that in no way can blood donation expose a person to Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

participating in the Christmas Classic, a five-day gymnastic competition.

During the event, each child hopped on one leg, scampers through a tunnel, ran through hula hoops, did somersaults and maintained his balance on the beam, while coach Maggie Humann kept time and score.

Her assistants, Sandy Brown and Rose Koslowski, directed the children and helped those who couldn't stay on the balance beam solo.

The group is part of the Upland Recreation Department's Kinder-gym program, a gymnastics class for children 3 to 5 years old.

The class of 24 meets for an hour twice a week where they learn to flip, roll and balance.

"It really helps their self-esteem and coordination," said Roseanne Crist, director of the recreation department.

While conducting her class,

Humann doesn't allow parents to sit and watch, Crist said, "because the children tend to cling to the parents."

The demand to sign up for Kinder-gym is so great that the recreation department is planning to add more classes after Jan. 1.

"We have a very long waiting list," Crist said.

From the sound of the children, the class is great fun.

"I like to hop and roll," said Amy Stevens, 4, after she scampers across the balance beam gracefully and without help.

"The obstacle course is not hard," testified Nicholas Webber, 5. "And I don't need any help on the balance beam." And who is the best gymnast in the world.

"Me," said 4-year-old Christina Miranda, as she prepared to do her stuff.

Nails coated with rosin are difficult to pull out. To coat your own nails and brads, dissolve 4 tablespoons of powdered rosin in a pint of denatured alcohol. Store in a tightly covered container. Pour a small amount of the solution in an old shallow pan, then swish the nails around in the solution until they are covered. Dump the nails out on old newspapers, stir occasionally until they are dry. To extract a wooden plug, drill a 1/8 in. pilot hole through its center, carefully so as not to drill into a dowel or scuw beneath. Then grind the point of a #8 steel wood screw and screw it into the hole. When the screw bottoms out, the plug will pop.

It's time for making resolutions

New Year's custom too easy to break

By Marianne Aiken

It's easier to break them and make them than keep them ... New Year's resolutions, that is.

Today's the day for vows of self-improvement in the coming year.

On Christmas Eve, several folks waiting to see a movie at the new Edwards Cinemas in Rancho Cucamonga thought ahead to what they'd be promising themselves today.

Camie Yngelmo, 19, of San Luis Obispo, sat outside the theater in the sunshine with her 6-year-old niece and her niece's 4-year-old friend.

The little girls came up with several resolutions.

"Be nicer and give more presents," said Trisha Yngelo of Corona, who was evidently moved by the Christmas spirit that day.

Her friend, Sarah Rose Roberts of Upland, said she would try to stop sucking on her fingers and biting her nails.

Camie came up with a more adult resolution, a vow many adults are probably making today. She said she'd try to give up the habit of overeating.

Steven Overby had to think for a while before he could name his resolution. He said he really didn't have any bad habits.

"Usually people make New Year's resolutions and don't keep them," observed the 32-year-old Rancho Cucamonga man.

As his 3-year-old son and 6-year-old daughter cavorted at his feet, Overby finally decided he wanted to spend more time with his three children in 1987.

Overby's father, Stanley, stood nearby.

The 59-year-old grandfather from Ojai said he didn't have any resolutions, "not a one."

"Whatever I did before, I'm going to do more of it now," Overby pledged.

"This really isn't my doll," he added, pointing to the soft toy cradled in his arms.

Ann Binnall, 30, of Alta Loma said she would try to give up the habit of being late.

Binnall said she is typically 20 to 30 minutes late everywhere she goes, but it should be noted that not only was she on time but she arrived early to meet her children's grandmother for a matinee that day.

"I've been late since I was 5 years old," she said.

Her 4-year-old son, Trevor, shrugged his shoulders when asked what his New Year's resolutions were.

His mother explained the meaning of the custom.

"How about making your bed every morning?" she suggested. □

Foundation tells grants recipients

The Highlander Educational Foundation has announced winners of its first competition for grants at Upland High School.

A total of $3,468 was awarded to seven different academic departments for the purchase of equipment and supplies to enhance their programs.

Work Experience Coordinator Nancy Lease will acquire a computer-based guidance system which provides college and career information. Novels for sophomore English students will be purchased by Barbara Moyer. Speech and drama students will benefit from the purchase of a video camera by their teachers, Cindy Little and Sandra Donahue.

Six cassette players will be provided for a proposed language lab for the foreign language department. American history and journalism students of Jon Wenrick will be watching new visuals on an overhead projector. Geology teacher, Victor Miller, will now have a locking case to display rock specimens in his classroom. Computer literacy students of Anna Dowden and Vicki Robertson will be able to see their programs on a color monitor. Seniors studying economics will learn from a stock market unit entitled, "You & The Investment World."

Another grant cycle is anticipated later in the school year.

Walker replaces chair of planners

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — County Supervisor Larry Walker last week replaced the chairwoman of the county Planning Commission with a Chino Hills resident who shares more of Walker's planning philosophy.

Howard Ritter was named the 4th Supervisorial District's representative on the Planning Commission, replacing Chino resident Karen Bristow, who was recently voted to chair the commission.

"I just felt it was time for a change," said Walker who said he'd had disagreements with Bristow in the past.

The two have disagreed on several planning issues including the future of the Chino Valley Agricultural Preserve.

Bristow recently voted to recommend that a specific plan be developed for the 13,300-acre preserve before it is allowed to be broken up and developed.

Walker has called for the preserve to be maintained for at least another 10 years.

Ritter was selected from only two applicants for the commission seat, Walker said.

"His strength in this situation is that I have a greater degree of confidence in my ability to work with him," Walker said.

Ritter, at 51, has served on the Chino Hills Municipal Advisory Commission since its inception. He is employed as the manager of an Anaheim industrial plant, Walker said.

The remainder of the term to which Ritter was appointed will expire Jan. 31, 1987 at which time Walker said he will reappoint the man.

Walker, a former Chino Mayor, took office Dec. 1 along with former Rancho Cucamonga Mayor Jon Mikels.

Mikels recently announced the appointments of: Richard Avent, an Upland land developer, to the Life still an ordeal 12 months after plane hits mall

By Kimberly Heinrichs

A year after a plane crashed into a Concord mall and nearly took Wendy Guadagni's life, she is looking ahead.

The Upland resident, who received third-degree burns over almost half her body, has spent 2½ months in hospitals and has undergone 12 surgeries.

"I want this to be over with so I (can) put myself ahead to when it's over," Guadagni said of her ordeal since the tragedy, which claimed the lives of her cousin and five others.

A small plane crashed into the roof of the Sunvalley Mall Dec. 23, 1985, sending a fireball into the stores where the 21-year-old was shopping with her cousin.

Guadagni and the parents of her cousin are some of the dozens of people who have filed lawsuits against the city, the mall and the estate of the pilot. Her attorney said motions are in the works to consolidate the lawsuits.

Meanwhile, Guadagni went back to Concord to spend Christmas with her relatives as she had planned to do last year.

Although less tragic than last year, the season is still sharp with painful memories, she said before the holiday.

"It's going to be the first Christmas without my cousin and (the accident is) all they talk about up there," she said.

"This is one of the first (Christmases), so it'll be a little hard, but I'm sure the others will be better," she said.

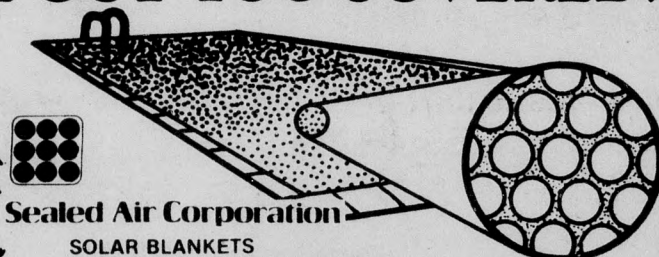

It is this forward-looking attitude that has gotten her through the last year.

Guadagni didn't flinch as she flipped through the photograph album she kept of her ordeal.

The photos range from the painfully gruesome

R.C. residents reverse stance, back Mikels

By Mike Krapfl

In another flip-flop over a proposed county jail in Rancho Cucamonga, residents pledged early last week to support the same county supervisor they were trying to remove from office the week before.

"Provided Supervisor Jon Mikels does work to move the proposed jail from our downtown," said Cliff Vail. "If he does, we'll support him and help him to make sure the jail goes elsewhere."

The week before, Vail had circulated a petition outside Rancho Cucamonga City Council Chambers asking for a recall of Mikels. Mikels has been a supervisor about one month.

On the flip, Vail wrote, "We overwhelmingly voted Nov. 4 against having the jail in our city. Yet Jon Mikels still supports and is actively working to get this jail in our city. He does not represent the people. We must recall him at once."

The vote Vail referred to was a non-binding, advisory poll asking whether Rancho Cucamonga residents wanted a jail built behind the new Foothill Communities Law and Justice Center. Voters overwhelmingly opposed the proposed 800-bed jail.

As a Rancho Cucamonga City Council member, Mikels opposed putting the advisory measure on the ballot.

Recently, Mikels said he hoped to quiet opposition to the jail by consolidating Municipal and Superior Courts in Rancho Cucamonga. One of the biggest arguments against the downtown jail was that it should remain close to Municipal Courts where more prisoners are tried.

The recently approved move of Municipal Courts from Ontario to Rancho Cucamonga, however, hasn't quieted opposition to the jail.

Last week, Mikels announced he was opposed to the concept of a jail in downtown Rancho Cucamonga. He pledged "to work with the members of the Rancho Cucamonga City Council and my colleagues on the Board of Supervisors to change that concept."

In light of Mikels' announcement, Vail said "I'd

Bus driver turns in woman's life savings

By Patrick McGreevy

A Pomona woman is being praised by Ontario police and officials from the county's bus system for turning in a purse she found that contained $10,000.

Originally thought to be drug money, the cash turned out to be a senior citizen's life savings.

Frankie Gravely, 36, a part-time bus driver for Omnitrans, saw the purse fall out of a car on Mountain Avenue on Oct. 3.

The money turned out to belong to a 69-year-old woman from the City of Commerce, who since has had her purse and money returned.

Today, the Omnitrans Board of Directors will honor Gravely for immediately turning the purse in to the county bus systems' lost and found department.

"We thought it should be recognized," said Robert Chafin, Omnitrans general manager. "It's not often that something like this happens. I think the employee deserves a vote of thanks."

Gravely said she deserves no special credit for turning the purse in.

"Keep it? That's not me. I knew that that was the lady's life savings," Gravely said.

Gravely, who drives a bus in the Ontario-Montclair area, saw the purse fall out of a car when the car door flew open as it was pulled out of the Ontario Target Store parking lot on Mountain Avenue.

Gravely stopped the bus and had a passenger get out and retrieve the purse.

"We tried to catch up with the woman (car driver) at the next light, but she probably thought all our horn blowing was to get her to turn right or something," Gravely said.

Gravely and the head of Omnitrans' lost and found department discovered the money inside the purse, wrapped in thick plastic.

"We thought it might have had something to do with drug dealers," she said. They called the Ontario Police Department, which contacted the owner of the purse.

"It gives me great pleasure to say that, due to the honesty and thoughtfulness of the Omnitrans employees, this large sum of money, which was the owner's life savings, was returned to her," L.M. Kolbrek, Ontario's former police chief, wrote to Chafin.

first pictures to the more recent ones of a young woman on her way to healing. In each she is smiling.

Despite her outward scars, Guadagni displays a surprising lack of self-consciousness. She agreed to let Bay Area television stations and newspapers photograph her a day after the accident.

But she guards her internal scars more carefully.

"I have nightmares about things crashing, about explosions," she said. "I still look in the sky every time I go outside to see if there are planes in the sky."

When she goes to her thrice-weekly therapy sessions at a San Diego hospital, she said she still feels a rush of fear when the medical helicopters land on the hospital roof.

"I feel unlucky," she said.

But at her age, she is impatient to get her many surgeries over with and get on with the business of living. Still, she faces between 10 and 20 more operations on her hands and face, according to her physicians.

They're not telling Guadagni how long those will take, but she has her own ideas.

"I hope it's in a year," she said.

Such optimism is not necessarily foolish in her case. Last spring when she told her doctors she would start back to college in the fall, they cautioned her not to get her hopes up. But she did, and last fall the junior completed a course at a junior college.

The Chi Omega sorority sisters she lives with on the San Diego State University campus have been warm and accepting, she said. To get over the awkwardness of facing and understanding their friend's situation, some have even studied burns for school projects, she said.

Because she has lost the tendons in some of the fingers on each hand, she never will regain full use of her hands, she said. But she is recovering functional use with occupational therapy three hours a week.

The end of last week she was to return to the same Berkeley hospital she was taken to a year ago for mouth surgery, she said.

"They're going to cut me a smile," she said, smiling.

By the time she goes back to school, the bandages will be off, she said. However, she will still be wearing a pressurized face mask for therapy.

"I'll have to wear some nightmare contraption they'll come up with," she predicted. "That's the hardest — wearing it to school — because it draws attention to myself."

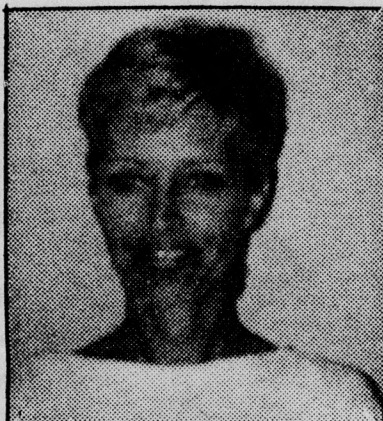

But Guadagni says she doesn't let the stares of other students get her down. And none of them snicker as they pass, she said.

"I think it's because I look them straight in the eye," she said.

Ontario Museum attempts to boost image, financing

By David Silver

It's not easy running a museum.

Unless you're the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, people sometimes ignore you.

In the past few years, the Ontario Museum of History and Art has been struggling to develop an image in the community.

But it has the same problem museums nationwide have: not enough money and little publicity.

Most of its funding comes from the city, which has allocated a budget of $80,000 a year.

It also has received some corporate funding. Chevron Land and Development Co. recently donated more than $200,000 over a five-year period.

Mervyn's donated $40,000, but there's still only enough to hire one full-time director to run the 20,000-square-foot museum.

There also have been some private donations in the amount of $125,000.

LouAnn Svenson is the director who is responsible for filling up the museum with exhibits and getting the word out to the public.

"I think we are the only museum I know of that has a building and few artifacts. Usually, it's the other way around," Svenson said.

The museum was created by an act of the City Council in 1979 when city offices moved to their new location.

The council wanted to provide a cultural facility for the purpose of assembling local history and art from around the world.

The museum graces the grounds of the old City Hall complex at 225 S. Euclid Ave., built in the Spanish style in 1937.

"The problem is, when you drive down Euclid you don't know it's there until you've passed it," she said.

If you don't drive past it and find your way into the museum, you will find many interesting exhibits.

One is Ontario's old General Electric flat iron plant that at one time was the city's biggest employer.

Adorning the walls are 23 irons that shows its evolution and a picture of Ronald Reagan when he came to the plant as host of the General Electric hour.

Other exhibits include: Oriental textile robes; a history of the Armstrong nurseries in the history wing and watercolor paintings of the Tarahumara Indians of Mexico in the art wing, to name a few.

Svenson said that since there aren't enough permanent artifacts, the museum has a lot of changing exhibits.

To help in its effort to attract more funding for exhibits, a Friends of the Museum was formed and currently has 320 members.

Every December, the museum initiates a membership drive.

"It's hard to bring culture to a community with the limited funds," Svenson said.

That's why in 1981 the Chaffey Community Art Association started to coordinate and sponsor the art program of the museum.

"One membership payment lets you become a member of the art association and museum," she said.

The membership payments range from a high of $5,000 for a corporate membership to a low of $15 for a student or senior citizen.

"We're struggling very hard to raise the cultural level of the community," she said.

She said to raise that level and make the museum on par with others, there needs to be:

- Adequate storage space;
- Renovated art galleries;
- Track lighting for better lighting; and
- A fence across the front for better security.

She loves her job and sees lots of potential.

District agrees to remain in special ed plan area

The Ontario-Montclair School District board of trustees has decided to continue the district's participation in the West End Special Education Location Plan Area (SELPA).

In another related action recently, school board members also unanimously agreed to accept a report from the Issues Committee of the West End SELPA recommending long- and short-term actions for the special education services region.

The action follows the approval of the reimbursement of more than $120,000 to OMSD by the West End SELPA Governing Council last Friday. The money represents a payback to the district for the excess costs spent on educating children from other districts during the 1985-86 school year.

Of the estimated 250 students in OMSD's special education program at four district school sites, more than 140 are from other districts.

Current district estimates show that OMSD subsidizes more than $1.7 million from its general fund to run the special education program. Of that subsidy, more than $400,000 is for education and transportation of students who do not reside within the OMSD boundaries.

"Any money we can get and put back into our own special education program is appropriate," said Eileen Rigler, board vice president, after the meeting.

In a report to the school board at its Nov. 13 meeting, Superintendent George Dibs indicated that state and federal funds don't provide enough money to cover the costs the district's special education programs.

The trustees directed Dibs to work with other districts to address the excess cost issue.

Two weeks ago, the district applied to the West End SELPA for the partial reimbursement of excess costs, Dibs said.

"I'm pleased that the board received the report and decided to continue the district's participation in the SELPA program," said Dibs after the meeting. "We must continue to provide quality educational programs for severely handicapped special education students."

The West End SELPA is comprised of the Ontario-Montclair, Alta Loma, Central, Chaffey, Chino, Cucamonga, Etiwanda, Mt. Baldy, Mountain View and Upland school districts, and the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools.

In other business, the trustees unanimously approved a contract with the Mobile Modular Management Corp. to lease four additional portable trailer classrooms for the district.

Missing-children bracelet firm stops operation

A Rancho Cucamonga business which sold copper bracelets to help benefit the nationwide search for missing children has closed its doors.

The business, Kids Missing in America (KMIA), stopped operating in November, eight months after it kicked off its sales campaign with much fanfare last spring.

KMIA began selling the bracelets, which bear a stamp-size photo of a missing child, last April for $10 apiece. All proceeds, except processing costs, were to benefit the National Child Safety Council.

But an attorney representing the NCSC, a non-profit organization which is devoted in part to locating missing children, said the organization hasn't received a penny from KMIA.

"We never got any money," said T. Harrison Stanton in a recent telephone interview from his Jackson, Mich., office.

According to Stanton, KMIA approached the NCSC last March with its idea to manufacture and sell the bracelets. "They said they would give us a share of the profits," he said.

"It seemed to be a worthy cause and in line with our programs that have to do with missing children," Stanton added. "So we let them do it."

The Rancho Cucamonga business hoped to raise enough money through the sale of the bracelets to allow the NCSC to distribute directories of missing children to every police agency, probation department, school and social services department in the country.

In return, the NCSC allowed the group to use the name KMIA, which belongs to the National Child Safety Council, Stanton said.

But in late October, the NCSC terminated the arrangement, "because we were not satisfied with the way things were working out," Stanton said.

According to Stanton, KMIA had set up telephone banks and was trying to sell the bracelets through phone solicitation, which the NCSC didn't approve of.

Rotary to give awards

Rotary Youth Leadership Awards (RYLA) will be presented by the Rancho Cucamonga Rotary Club. This year the club plans to give the award to two high school juniors in addition to Stephanie Fox, a Rotary exchange student from New Zealand, who will attend Alta Loma High School.

Winning participants will attend a leadership training conference in Running Springs on March 27-29.

To apply, students may pick up application forms from their high school counseling offices or by calling James Dyer at 987-4644, the RYLA chairman for the Rancho Cucamonga Rotary Club. The deadline for applications is Jan. 16.

rather work with him than recall him. But we'll use whatever means necessary to keep the jail out of our downtown."

Kathy Wheatley, who was among 14 representatives of various PTA groups and homewoners associations to meet with Vail the week before, said the jail must be kept out of downtown for the safety of Rancho Cucamongans.

"I have two children," she said. "They enjoy going to the bowling alley and the movie theater (near the proposed jail site). I don't think a jail has any place in that spot."

Another resident, Patti Guye, agreed. "We waited for a long time for an entertainment center in Rancho Cucamonga. A jail (near the intersection of Haven Avenue and Foothill Boulevard) will just drive us away from it."

"If Jon Mikels opposes the jail locating in downtown Rancho Cucamonga, we'll back him," Guye said. "We want to support him if at all possible."

He has also appointed Paula Grigsby, a home builder, to the Commission on the Status of Women.

The supervisors also voted recently to approve a $4,089,629 court settlement with residents of the Hampshire Avenue subdivision north of San Bernardino, in which 32 homes were damaged during a 1981 flood. The county will pay one-third of the settlement in three installments and the city of San Bernardino will pay the remainder of the settlement, according to County Counsel Alan Marks.

In other recent action, the supervisors voted to:

- Approve a six percent increase in court filing fees giving the $3 average increase in Municipal Court fees to the law library and half the $6 average increase in Superior Court fees the law library, while the other half goes to the county's general fund to be allocated to the Superior Courts.
- Approve an 80-cent increase in residential trash rates in the unincorporated areas and a 35-cent per cubic yard increase for commercial trash rates to cover both increased cost of liability insurance for disposal companies and the increase in tipping fees being charged to the companies.
- Accept the donation of a four-wheel-drive ambulance from the Ontario Parkway Kiwanis Club to the county Sheriff's Department.
